It was then I started to ask myself just how useful Google Maps was for me and I was at a loss as to what other options I had for driving directions. Luckily, I came across a pretty nifty little tool for iOS called Uber Go. Uber Go is a GPS app for iOS which offers driving directions with time estimates that are actually accurate to the minute. (Google Maps can be inaccurate and slow down to a crawl, as you may know.) Uber Go does not use Google Maps, but their own proprietary mapping system, but their directions are the same as the options you get with Google Maps, which is pretty cool. When I used it for the first time, it was pretty darn accurate and fairly fast. The only negative I found was that directions had a large white line across them which made you have to swipe back and forth to try and ignore it. After a brief go around, the line disappeared, but it was still pretty strange. This is probably something that can be worked out by Uber, but with the simplicity of the app, I was not surprised. If you're someone who is not a fan of your iPad, Uber Go works on Google Maps on Android, as well as iPhones. Download the Uber Go app here.Changing the edd6d56e20
