The EARTH DEFENSE FORCE, being an alliance of four major powers (the EDF) is being subjugated and an invasion of their main base is imminent. The threat of invasion is growing more and more, and the EDF is in dire need of a new weapon.

Tetsuya "Bushi" Nenami, a former member of the EDF, has produced a prototype of an exoskeleton on his own, a flying weapon that he calls the "air-raider". The Bushi exoskeleton was officially approved by the EDF's leader, Commander Pitou (PYT-oh) just a few days ago. But, Nenami will not be staying in the EDF after all. He has retired to a private world along with his wife and son. The EARTH DEFENSE FORCE, having been after the Bushi's invention. They have sent an intelligence agent, Nicholai "Nicky" Kimura (Kim-sir-uh), to be Bushi's personal escort and to keep an eye on him. After their first meeting, Nenami decided to bring Nicky on board to become Bushi's weapon developer. In the meantime, the invasion has begun. And it is time to take on the EDF head-on. As a new heavy weapons specialist, Nicky's new mission is to find a way to defeat the EDF and to save not just Bushi, but the world. Distribution This species occurs in the following locations: Caribbean Sea Notes Additional information regarding this species:

Distribution: Range: Caribbean Sea. Yucatán, Mexico. Evidence: A large, heavy-bodied fusiform shell, with quite a radial character. There is much variability between the two main populations.

Identification of the specimens from Mexico may be problematic. The distinction is based on the proportional lengths of the interior whorls. Dorsal ribs may sometimes be irregular in form, but rarely completely irregular. Growth marks give a strong indication of age.

gasepsie Nekourgasepsie, also known as the Battle of the Mavrovo Forest (), was fought in the Mavrovo forest near the town of Mavrovo on the slopes of the Balkan mountains, in the region of Makedonija in what would become a part of the Kingdom of Greece in 1804. By the end of the Russo-Turkish War (1768-1774), which had taken place between the Russian Empire and the Ottoman Empire, the southern and central parts of modern Greece including the region near Mavrovo were under Russian rule, and the Ottoman Empire lost all of what is today northern Greece. Ottoman troops under the command of Totrul had been engaged in a campaign in the area around the Mavrovo to retake all of the region of Macedonia. At the Battle of the Mavrovo Forest in 1804, the Russian-Turkish forces clashed near Mavrovo, after their invading force had captured the important village of Mavrogiali. The skirmish resulted in a Russian victory, with the intervention of the commander in chief Fyodor Apraksin. The battle itself and its aftermath brought a temporary end to war between the two countries. Although large portions of the forest were devastated, it was not turned into a battle field due to the skill of the Russian forces. The region around Mavrovo would remain part of Russia until 1864, while the main part of Greece became independent in 1827. Background After the Russo-Turkish War (1768-1774), in which Russia had defeated the Ottoman Empire in its attempt to conquer the Crimean Khanate, the Ottomans tried to recover from the loss and extend their power in the Balkans. To this end, at the beginning of 1804, Russian and Ottoman forces clashed three times in the region of Mavrovo. However, the decisive battle happened in the Mavrovo forest in April of that year. At the beginning of the Russo-Turkish war, the Kingdom of Greece under the leadership of Otto of Habsburg had fought for its independence since 1765. On 19 March, the Greeks had joined with the Russians and had received a great Russian subsidy. In 1803, the Greeks successfully won the Russo-Turkish War (1768-1774), and had liberated many Turkish and Greek populated towns in Southern and Central Macedonia and Pelagonia. In 1804, the Russian troops and
